Morgan Receives Northern California Supplier Development Council's Supplier of the Year Award

Pleasanton, CA, June 13, 2005-- D.W. Morgan Company, a leader in global supply chain optimization consulting, logistics and transportation management services, has been named "Supplier of the Year" by the Northern California Supplier Development Council (NCSDC). Each year, the regional council recognizes companies and suppliers who support the council's mission to promote diversity in the workplace with the "Excellence in Supplier Diversity" Awards.

"It's an extraordinary honor to win this award and it wouldn't have been possible without the support of NCSDC and of course the company who nominated us, Cisco Systems," said DW Morgan President and CEO David Morgan. "Involvement in Cisco System's Supplier Diversity Program has helped our company increase brand awareness in our industry which in turn has helped us triple our business in the last three years."

"We recognize those companies that have demonstrated a commitment to diversity such as DW Morgan," said NCSDC President Michael Ruiz. "Morgan winning this award is proof our mission is working in a tangible form--- we were able to bring Morgan together with our member companies that are dedicated to promoting supplier diversity."

The awards were announced at NCSDC's 28th Annual "Excellence in Supplier Diversity" Awards Gala on Friday, June 10 in San Francisco, CA. There were a total four suppliers in four different categories, which received awards for excellence and five corporate awards. Cisco Systems received the Hall of Fame Award.

Over the past few years, Morgan has gained serious recognition for its supply chain technologies, winning Cisco's Growing with Technology Awards in 2003 and received Smithsonian/Computerworld Honors Laureate last year for its pioneering work on network-to-network computing.
